INVESTIGATION OF FUEL WOOD MADE

C. S. Judd has made his first routine report as executive officer of the board of agriculture and forestry. One of the routine work done as executive officer, he attended to two matters of importance. One was the refusal for the time being of a permit to cut grass on Nuuanu watershed, and the other the granting of a permit to remove 10 cubic yards of stone from the Honolulu watershed reserve in Mahiki.

In a statement of his policy Mr. Judd expresses strong approval of the "rigid protection of the indigenous Hawaiian forests for the purpose of water conservation," which the board has established.

"At the same time," he says, "the crying need in the territory for fuel wood must necessarily be heeded."

Mentioning that the demand for fuel is so great that the price of $14 a cord for algaroba wood delivered in Honolulu is higher than, under unfavored conditions, it should be, and that the plantations and other companies find their fuel wood bills a very large item of expense, the territorial forester makes the following recommendation of a remedy for the conditions stated:

"The present annual consumption of fuel wood and present source of supply should be thoroughly investigated and a study made of the means of increasing the supply by the encouragement of tree planting on present unoccupied waste lands."

This he proposes to do on lines similar to those used by the United States forest service lately in studying the wood industries in about 36 states of the Union in cooperation with state foresters and other similar officials. Being still connected with the federal service as a collaborator, Mr. Judd is assured of such assistance from that quarter as will make the cost of the investigation merely nominal.

Nurseryman Haighs reports a distribution to the general public of 8768 tree plants in January and of 10,300 to plantations and other corporations.
